

CHAPTER 4

FINDING AND DISCUSSION

This chapter includes the finding and the discussion of the data. The findings were written based on the research questions raised. Then, the discussion was described as the interpretation of the finding based on the related literature.

1.1 Findings

I split the presentation of the results of the study into three different sections according to the research questions. Those were (1) the realization of interpersonal meaning in the First Presidential Debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016, (2) the types of mood used in the First Presidential Debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016, (3) the modality types used in the First Presidential Debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016.

1.1.1 The Realization of Interpersonal Meaning in the First Presidential Debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016

The interpersonal meanings in the transcripts of the debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016 which were identified and analyzed. The analysis was concentrated on the analysis of Mood and Residue. The Mood is the central resource established and maintained such as giving or demanding goods and services or information. While Residue refers to part of the clauses which is not belong to the Mood.

The Mood of a clause can be identified from its grammatical structure; statement is realized by Declarative Mood, question is realized by Interrogative Mood, command is realized by Imperative Mood

Based on the analysis of the interpersonal meaning realized in the first presidential debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016 have Mood and Residue. It is realized by the wordings of the clause based on the elements of interpersonal meaning.

1.1.2 The Analysis of Mood Types Used in The First Presidential Debate Between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016

After identifying the sentences and the clauses, the writer concludes that the Mood Element consists of subject and finite. The classification will be based on the order of Subject and Finite. While the order of Mood is Subject and Finite, the Mood will be declarative. While the order of Mood is Finite and Subject, the Mood will be interrogative. If the order of Mood is Finite only without Subject, the Mood will be imperative.

Based on the information in Table, the most dominant Mood Types used in the First Presidential Debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016 is Declarative Mood. It indicates that: First, the debater wants to state or declare something. Second, the debater only provides information to the audiences through the debate. While the less dominant are Imperative and Interrogative mood.

Table 4.1.2 The analysis of Mood Types

Debaters	Declarative	Interrogative	Imperative	TOTAL
Hillary Clinton	190	2	3	195
	97,44%	1,02%	1,54%	100%
Donald Trump	266	3	5	274
	97,08%	1,09%	1,83%	100%

1.1.3 The Analysis of Modality Types Used in The First Presidential Debate Between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016

In the transcript of the analysis of the First Presidential Debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016, there are few modalities are found. And all of them are: First, ‘can’ is the only modal finite that found in the transcript. ‘Can’ is categorized in low degree of modality. Second, ‘would and will’ are categorized in medium degree of modality. Last, “should, need, have to, have got to, are going to’, are categorized as high degree.

1.2 Discussion

The goal of the study was to provide more insight into the realization of interpersonal meaning, the analysis of Mood Types and the analysis of Modality Types which is used in the First Presidential Debate between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016.

1.2.1 The Realization of Interpersonal Meaning in The First Presidential Debate Between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016

From the analysis, the writer notes that the Mood Element consists of subject and finite, while residue consists of Predicator, Complement and Adjunct. The Subject and Complement are typically realized by nominal groups. The Finite is realized by the tensed element of the verb. The Predicator is realized by the non-tensed (or nonfinite) element or elements of the verbal group. The Adjunct is realized by an adverbial group or prepositional phrase. Pay attention to the analysis bellow.

The analysis of interpersonal meaning shows the clear structure of the clause. The interpersonal meaning is realized from the system of Mood and Residue. Mood consists of the Subject and the Finite. The Subject is a nominal group while the Finite is part of a verbal group. Thus, in 'You don't have good community relations in Chicago', I is Subject, meanwhile, don't is Finite. The Subject is a nominal group in which a personal pronoun. Meanwhile, the Finite element is a verbal operator.

1.2.2 The Analysis of Mood Types Used in the First Presidential Debate Between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016

The Mood Types of a clause can be identified from its grammatical structure. In this case Modality Types commonly are divided into Declarative, Interrogative and Imperative. Statement is realized by Declarative Mood, question is realized by Interrogative Mood, and command is realized by Imperative Mood. The followings are the examples of the Declarative, Interrogative and Imperative Mood.

a. Declarative

In this debate the Declarative Mood is the most dominant types which appear. Typically Declarative mood have subject + verb word order, but sometimes there is no subject. The examples are as follow:

The declarative mood indicated that the information is provided from the speaker to the listener; the speaker is a provider of information and the listener/reader is a recipient of information.

b. Interrogative

Interrogative Mood is not the most dominant types which appear in this debate. Interrogative sentences express questions, but they often have other functions too. In interrogative sentences, the subject is typically after the verb or between the auxiliary and main verbs. But sometimes the order is subject + verb. The examples are as follow:

The interrogative mood indicated that the speaker expects to receive an answer from a listener/reader. This shows that the speaker is a recipient of information, and the listener is a (potential) provider of information.

c. Imperative

The Imperative Mood indicated that the speaker demands the information (or goods & services to a listener; the speaker is a recipient of information, and the listener is a provider of information/service, as in the case of the interrogatives.. Imperative Mood express directives, such as orders, instructions, requests, invitations etc. The examples are as follow:

1.2.3 The Analysis of Modality Types Used in The First Presidential Debate Between Hillary Clinton and Donald Trump in 2016

Modality is the expression of the writer's attitudes or comments towards a proposition. It is expressed through the modal verbs (may, can, could, will, should); semi-modal verbs (have to, be going to, have got to); and other adjectives, adverbs and nouns (probably, probable, probability).

Modality refers to the space between “yes” and “no”, showing the speaker’s judgments of the probabilities or the obligations involved in what she is saying. In this analysis, there is three degree of modality. The example can be seen below:
